CHICAGO--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Feb. 26, 2019-- Global professional services firm Huron (NASDAQ: HURN) today announced a series of leadership promotions and organizational changes to support and accelerate the achievement of the company's growth strategy.

"I am pleased to announce a number of leadership promotions that we believe best position Huron for future growth. Today's senior leadership changes demonstrate our deep pool of talent is prepared to work collectively to achieve our strategic objectives," said James H. Roth, chief executive officer of Huron. "This realignment of our most senior talent will enhance our ability to more quickly execute our priorities to drive shareholder value, including strengthening our competitive advantages, achieving sustainable revenue growth and margin expansion, and of paramount importance, developing our people."

Hussey Named President and Chief Operating Officer

C. Mark Hussey has been promoted to president in addition to his responsibilities as chief operating officer. In his new role, Hussey will continue to report to Roth and will now be responsible for the day-to-day management and operations of Huron's business units in addition to the corporate operations, human resources, marketing and information technology functions. Since joining Huron in 2011, Hussey has been a trusted leader within the company and is highly respected among each of the businesses and corporate departments.

The appointment of Hussey to president and chief operating officer will allow Roth to focus more time and attention on the overall strategic direction of the firm and to partner more closely with Huron's businesses in the markets they serve. In addition, Roth will be more deeply involved with the attraction, recruitment and retention of top talent, which is the most important asset and growth driver for Huron over the long term.

Prior to his sales leadership role, Gallas was responsible for Huron's healthcare performance improvement and technology services solutions from 2012 to 2015. He has also held various leadership roles with other national consulting firms over the course of his career.

In his role as managing director, he has more than 25 years of experience in the business of higher education and academic medical centers, helping clients navigate disruption through strategic planning, performance improvement, enterprise systems deployment and research enterprise solutions.

After nearly ten years leading the education business, Laura A. Yaeger has decided to return more of her focus to the market and serving clients. She is taking on new leadership responsibilities in the education business as the head of sales and client service excellence. For Yaeger and the education business, this is an opportune time to establish this new role focused on assuring that the team achieves its top line growth targets. Yaeger will continue to play an instrumental role in several of Huron's enterprise-level strategic initiatives and provide leadership within the education business's student solution.

"I want to thank Mark and Laura for their significant contributions to the healthcare and education businesses. Mark's success in transforming the healthcare business over the past two years has been critical to positioning that segment for future growth. Over the past ten years, Laura has organically grown the education business while further establishing Huron as the premier consulting partner to the higher education industry.
