Huron's Ida Quamina honored for excellence in leadership and Courtney Mungovan honored for excellence in client service

CHICAGO--(BUSINESS WIRE)--May 26, 2021-- Global professional services firm Huron (NASDAQ: HURN) today announced that Ida Quamina, managing director, and Courtney Mungovan, senior director, have been named Consulting magazine Women Leaders in Technology for 2021. Ida Quamina was honored in the leadership excellence category for her impact helping healthcare and higher education leaders digitally transform their business operations to achieve a sustainable future and building new capabilities embedded across the company to support Huron's growth. Courtney Mungovan earned the honor in the client service category for her dedication to guiding healthcare providers through successful digital transformation to strengthen their operations and improve the patient experience.

"Ida and Courtney are exceptional leaders who have been instrumental in delivering high-value, technology-enabled services to our clients and serving as role models to women across our business," said James H. Roth, chief executive officer at Huron. "I congratulate them on this well-deserved recognition and look forward to their continued growth and success in the years to come."

Ida has 30 years of experience collaborating with higher education and healthcare organizations to successfully navigate cloud adoption, strengthen their financial performance and achieve operational excellence. Ida demonstrates her passion and advocacy for fostering diversity, equity and inclusion across the company through her work as a leader in Huron's Black Alliance employee resource group and by supporting the development of women leaders.

Courtney is a healthcare technology expert with over 20 years of experience leading teams responsible for integrating technology into all aspects of our clients' operations to strengthen financial performance and deliver a better patient experience. Courtney is a champion for women in the workplace and is dedicated to the professional development of women and women in technology.

Ida and Courtney were recognized for their achievements during a virtual Women Leaders in Technology awards event on Thursday, May 20, 2021.
